Back to School

The new Queen Anne High School in Dunfermline was completed in 2003 and immediately entered the history books as Europe's largest secondary school building. Sign Plus were commissioned at that point to manufacture and install a revised School logo which was installed on the North elevation of this impressive structure.

Seven years on and Sign Plus were again instructed to provide additional signage, including the replacement of the modern logo with the traditional School badge, now resplendent on the North and South elevations

After discussing options and viewing samples we were able to agree on the overall specification and dimensions for the job. The proposal consisted of 4 individual crests, 19mm flat cut text and various post mounted signage for the car park and entrance way.

Like all of our enquiries Sign Plus presented visuals with superimposed images of the work to be carried out as well samples and an explanatory quote. This enabled the client to see exactly what was being proposed to assist in making their decision.

The signage is very clear and modern reflecting the new style of building, yet holds the traditional look of the original School badge.

BSI Certification

BSI is a leading global provider of standards, management systems, business improvement and regulatory approval information. Having engaged with their examiner this year, we are delighted to have been awarded certification to underline our market leading aims within the sign industry

Sign Plus's certificate highlights that we operate a quality management system ISO for the design, manufacture, and installation of sign systems and managing the logistics of supply of related items as demanded by our customer base.

Snappy Signage

Sign Plus have been building up a strong relationship with Snappy Tomato Pizza based in England. They have been in the pizza market now for 20 years specialising in home deliveries. Snappy Tomato Pizza have stores located in Aberdeen in the North to Dorchester in the South. Sign Plus were asked to take on the signage for their local branch in Dunfermline back in May this year and also their latest venture which opened up in Elgin during October.

The signage requirement in Elgin (Bottom Left) helped illuminate the High Street with their branding through two uniquely modified light boxes. To allow for such an effect the digital images were printed onto a special translucent material which permitted light to shine through for maximum effect. This feature along with eye catching window graphics makes for an easily recognisable brand. The signage requirements for the Dunfermline branch (Bottom Right) required a different spec of signage, with stand off black acrylic letters, covered in coloured vinyl's to make up their corporate branding.

Brighten Up Your Future

Sign Plus work with a number of Universities across Scotland, carrying out work from simple health and safety signage to specialised bespoke signs

Our most recent project was through Heriot Watt University Students Union, who were looking for a bespoke built sign to go above their students cafeteria area.

After an initial site visit and meeting with the client it was clear that a specialised and high quality sign was required and that the skills and expertise of Sign Plus were required to take this forward.

We immediately recommended the use of an internal built up aluminium sign tray, complete with push through text which in turn was then back lit using blue LED lights. On the face of the sign we manufactured and installed a built up letter which was then mounted to the signage.

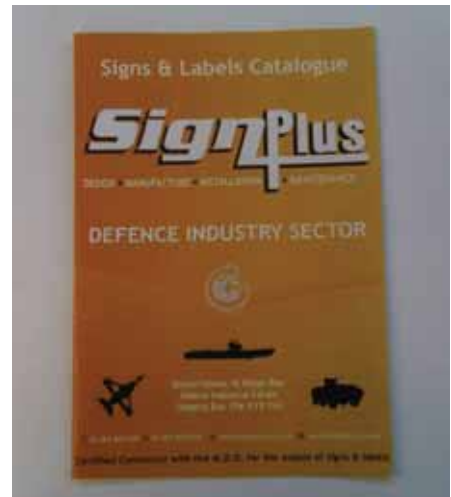

The wide range of aluminium signs are used for shop front signage, fascia signs, built up letters or flat cut letters. These can also be specialised illuminated or non illuminated to suite the clients needs.

Post Mounted can be particularly effective as directional signage or identification of a business. Sign Plus can provide detailed specifications and suggestions as to how best to use this type of signage.
